UPDATE - Bob Stone

This was a busy year on the trails, with more hours spent in May-June preparation by Anne and Jessie, followed by regular upkeep by our “ trails adopters” . We had more adopters this year than any previous year, and they have done a terrific job in keeping the trails in good shape. Generally the comments about the conditions of the trails have been very positive. In fact, on CBC’s Radio Noon, our trails were called the “ best maintained trails in New Brunswick. We do receive a few letters from hikers who have had some difficulties finding their way, which emphasizes that the markings cannot be too clear. Beavers, clear cutting, and sign removal have been some of the challenges this year, but, overall, the trails have offered a great deal of enjoyment to many people.

TRAIL ADOPTION

Over the years the trails have been cleared and marked sporadically by funded crews and spontaneously by keen individuals. Starting in 1993 the Grand Manan Trail Committee began to recruit volunteers Trail Adopters who are looking after specific trails, monitoring work needed and carrying out light maintenance. Heavy work is typically done in the Spring before many hikers are out. The commitment of time is not onerous. All tools and materials can be supplied from our inventory and 90% of the work done simply involves a pair of hand clippers to combat intrusive growth. Keeping us informed on current trail conditions is probably the main contribution. Let us know if you are interested.

TRAIL MAINTENANCE PAR EXCELLENCE - Judy Stone

Hikers who have encountered Anne Mitchell and Jessie James at work express amazement at this unlikely dynamic duo. If you are meeting them, you first encounter a machete-wielding powerhouse who mows down alders with the efficiency of a well-maintained machine. Once Jessie passes, you will be treated to the vision of a slim, elegant woman who looks as chic in her green Wellingtons and plaid shirt as she would in full formal dress. However, her choice of accessories, a chain saw and gas can, might give the observer a moment of hesitation. Thanks to these two dedicated individuals, the rest of those who take responsibility for trail upkeep find their sections in great shape at the beginning of the season.

We had the privilege of accompanying them and their faithful supervisor “ Pinky from The Whistle to Dark Harbour in May, and can attest to the fact that they take a personal pride in every aspect of the trail system, carefully checking red markers from both directions and clearing overgrowth with a vengeance. If a fallen tree blocks the path, Anne delivers the chainsaw to Jessie and then stands back. (She also stays clear of the cutlass, just in case of accidental beheading.) If the trail seems too close to the edge, they carefully re-route, doing as little cutting as possible, and tidying as they go. If a beaver pond threatens to force a major detour, as it did at the Money Brook crossing, Jessie, with a grin of one who loves a challenge, wades to the other side, boots filling with water, and hauls out dead trees and logs to make a bridge for his companions. If bugs are voracious, as they were that day, Anne and Jessie become banquet material and do not hurry their pace just to avoid being devoured (as did their companions). Only when they are totally satisfied that hikers will encounter the best possible conditions do they proceed to the next section.

We have hiked that trail many times, usually in 5 hours, but that day, despite the fact that Anne and Jessie took only a short lunch break, we arrived at the Western Head parking lot more than 9 hours after we had started. This spring, they each put in 79 hours getting the trails in shape, even building a solid bridge over Spring Rocks on the Hay Point Trail, and reports indicate that all their efforts are very much appreciated.

LAST YEAR' S TRAIL DINNER

This was again held at Laura's shortly after Thanksgiving, 2005, and again the dining room, which can cope with forty people, was filled to capacity. This is about the fifth year that Laura has done it for the benefit of the Trails, and it is always extremely popular. She donates all the food (this year the menu was meat lasagna and dessert) and some of the wine.

In the kitchen were a number of people helping out for free, including: Ce Bowden, Anne Mitchell, Linda L' Aventure, Joanne Ingalls, Fredonna Dean and Jana Gatta. We are very grateful to all of them.

At one end of the room the Stones had set up a computer slide show of scenes along the various trails. Basil Small, as head of the Rotary Club of Grand Manan was there to thank the Friends of Grand Manan Trails for their contribution towards the cost of painting Swallowtail Light. Altogether it added about $1000 to our budget for keeping up the trails and it was a great success.

A FEW OF THE LOCAL INHABITANTS

When the Loyalists settled here, there were no large mammals on the islands. The only non-flying, non-swimming species native to Grand Manan are two rodents - the meadow vole and the deer mouse. Both are bigger than their mainland counterparts. • Beavers were brought over about 1948 by residents, presumably for the purpose of establishing a population which could be trapped for pelts. The otter came by himself, swimming over from the mainland. Muskrats were introduced about 1935, to be trapped. The Norway rat and the house mouse probably came by ship. But nobody is quite sure how the red squirrel got here.

THE TRAILS MEETING

On June 6th there was a Trails meeting at Ce and Gene's place at Harrington Cove; almost all the trail adopters were present. The eighth edition of the Grand Manan Trails guide, edited by Bob Stone, has just been published, and for the first time it has a cover in colour and the price has been slightly increased. It has been revised over the winter, marking a number of changes. Also for the first time GPS waypoints have been included for major landmarks, listed by latitude and longitude. There was a discussion of trail adoption and what it involved; keeping the trail clear of brush and bramble, checking on erosion that would endanger the trail, and making sure that signs are clear. Trail adopters were handed out packets including clippers, a small saw, heavy work gloves and a copy of the new Trails guide. Jessie and Anne, who do the heavy work on the trails in May and June, reported on what they had done so far.

BIRD NOTES, 2006 - Peter Pearce

It can be said to have been fairly quiet on the Grand Manan birdwatching front in 2006 because of apparent declining populations of many avian species. The forests hardly rang with songbird voices and there were unusually few shorebirds along the strand. But, as always, the island lived up to its reputation during the year as the place to see birds in considerable variety and of regional rarity.

So it was that a Common Moorhen, rare here despite its name, was at Whale Cove in the spring and a much-sought-after Connecticut Warbler at Long Eddy Point in the fall. Several Peregrine Falcons, an endangered species, were noted - one on White Head Island spreading alarm and despondency among migrating shorebirds. Thanks to conservation efforts, Peregrines have staged quite a comeback in the last few decades. In contrast, a Piping Plover, an endangered bird hardly ever encountered on Grand Manan, spent a few August days on Long Pond Beach. On adjacent Great Pond a Eurasian Wigeon, a transatlantic visitor, joined the few pairs of its quite common American cousins breeding there.

One of the most exciting events during the year was the spotting of a Magnificent Frigatebird off northern Grand Manan in September. That was a bird from a faraway warmer clime that had not been reported in New Brunswick. At a different level of accessibility, a pair of Northern Cardinals brought their young to a Castalia bird feeder, to the delight of the homeowners peering from their kitchen window. And in Grand Harbour a Black-billed Cuckoo continued to sing, morning and evening, throughout the summer.

Included on a list of observed birds that might be characterized as usual unusuals were Egrets at Castalia Marsh, House Wrens and Prairie Warblers near Southwestern Head and a Clay-colored Sparrow at North Head.

In the short-term, the super abundance of mountain ash berries and spruce cones augurs well for some fruit - and seed-eating birds this coming winter. As for the long-term, in consideration of climate change - perhaps already manifesting itself in New Brunswick - who knows what exotic birds the future will bring to Grand Manan.

***** Peter Pearce was, in his professional life, a wildlife toxicologist, which meant that he was actually paid to watch birds. Now he does it for fun, and has been watching Grand Manan birds for nearly fifty years.

HIKING IN THE 1920s

Miss Jacobus (from Whale Cove Cottages) and friends going down to Dark Harbour. The road was little more than a cart track until a good one was finished in 1928. It was built mainly with " Statute Labour, a system whereby citizens were called out to work for certain periods of time depending upon an assessment made of their property. Enoch Green was one of those who helped to build the road-way which ended where the steep entrance now begins. A footpath skirted the high hill and it was not until some years later, after Andrew Johnson carved the road extension from the rocky hillside, that vehicles could be brought in. For his services, Mr. Johnson was promised a supply of herring as fertilizer for his farm. “The Cottage Girls,” a group of young women from the United States who became the nucleus of Whale Cove Cottages, were very active in the 20s and 30s in walking the local trails and keeping them open.

GEORGE LOGAN

George Logan died in June, aged 88, and probably just the way he wanted to— out on one of his many walks near Ottawa where he lived with his wife Helen. He was a keen hiker of the Grand Manan Trails and was usually out there somewhere in all weather, especially in the fog which he loved. He would seriously complain if a week went by without it.

At the beginning of July a number of his friends gathered together for a picnic to celebrate his visits here, and this is Holly Cheney’s memory of him:

My first view of George Logan was about this time of year in 2001. We had just bought the Motel and I happened to look out the kitchen window, when up from the beach came someone who looked like a cross between Ichabod Crane and Inspector Gadget, making long strides toward apartment #28 - George and Helen’s summer home here on the Island for many years. Wearing as usual a long-sleeved dress shirt (ironed), Bermuda shorts, knee socks, sturdy shoes, Tilley hat, the GPS around his neck and ski poles in hand. George certainly loved all his gadgets: computer, printer, digital camera, cell phone, handheld GPS. He would go for a hike all day - Helen would drop him off and come home - and then he would call her on his cell phone to pick him up at the Whistle, or Dark Harbour, or the Anchorage, or out some dirt road at the back of the Island.” He only had to be rescued once, when he was brought out on the back of an ATV which he found a very scary experience. He insisted that he was not lost.

George was born in Saint John and finally settled in Ottawa where he worked for the Government. In 1999, he was given a Lifetime Achievement Award for his contribution in founding the Canadian Microelectronics Industry. Besides his beloved wife, Helen, he leaves three children, two grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, and many friends on Grand Manan who remember him with great affection.

THE GRAND MANAN TRAILS PIN

The idea that we should identify ourselves with a distinctive logo originated with one of the Island's scout leaders in 1993. When contacted, long time Friend O. K. Schenk promptly designed a sew-on crest which was later transformed into a lapel pin. Mr. Schenk's beautiful watercolors are well known to Islanders and are included in some of our Island Museum's displays.

The design depicts a hard white shape symbolizing the Bunchberry (Cornus canadensis) which is common during the summer, and always a source of pleasure". The background colour is a dark forest green and the white flower-center (or berries) a bright red. First offered for sale in 1994 as a crest and now as a pin, they have become our principal fund raising activity. They are sold for $5.00 each, without profit to the sellers, by a number of GMTA members. They are available at the following places: The Grand Manan Business Centre, Island Arts, Marathon Inn, Shorecrest Lodge, Whale Cove Cottages, Grand Manan Museum, Harrington Cove Cottages.

Thanks to all of them.
